

This map highlights a few notable spots in your watershed as told by your neighbors. Connecting them all is bikeable route you can use to explore these spots. Visit them in person, Learn more about your watershed, or see the website linked below for more notable places. —Happy Exploring!

BALTIMORE CITY MAP

WHAT'S IN YOUR WATERSHED?

“HARRIS CREEK was considered to be the First Navy Yard in the United States. After we won our Independence in 1776, we were still bothered by the British on the Seas for Trade. They came after us in the War of 1812 to destroy this “nest of Pirates” in Baltimore. We needed a Navy and in 1797, the First Boat (Constellation) of the U.S. Navy was launched and later Clipper Ships (Pride II) that gave the British Ships a lot of trouble on the Seas. We eventually won that War and Historians have considered it as our Second War of Independence.”

—Ray Bahr MD, Watershed Activist & Resident

“REAL FOOD FARM is a unique spot - a multi-acre urban farm in the heart of Baltimore City, growing over a former lake, which was previously farm land itself. Its still a prominent through-path for members of our community and many students, a completely open farm for exploration, learning, and of course - literally - growing.”

—Tyler Brown, Farm Manager

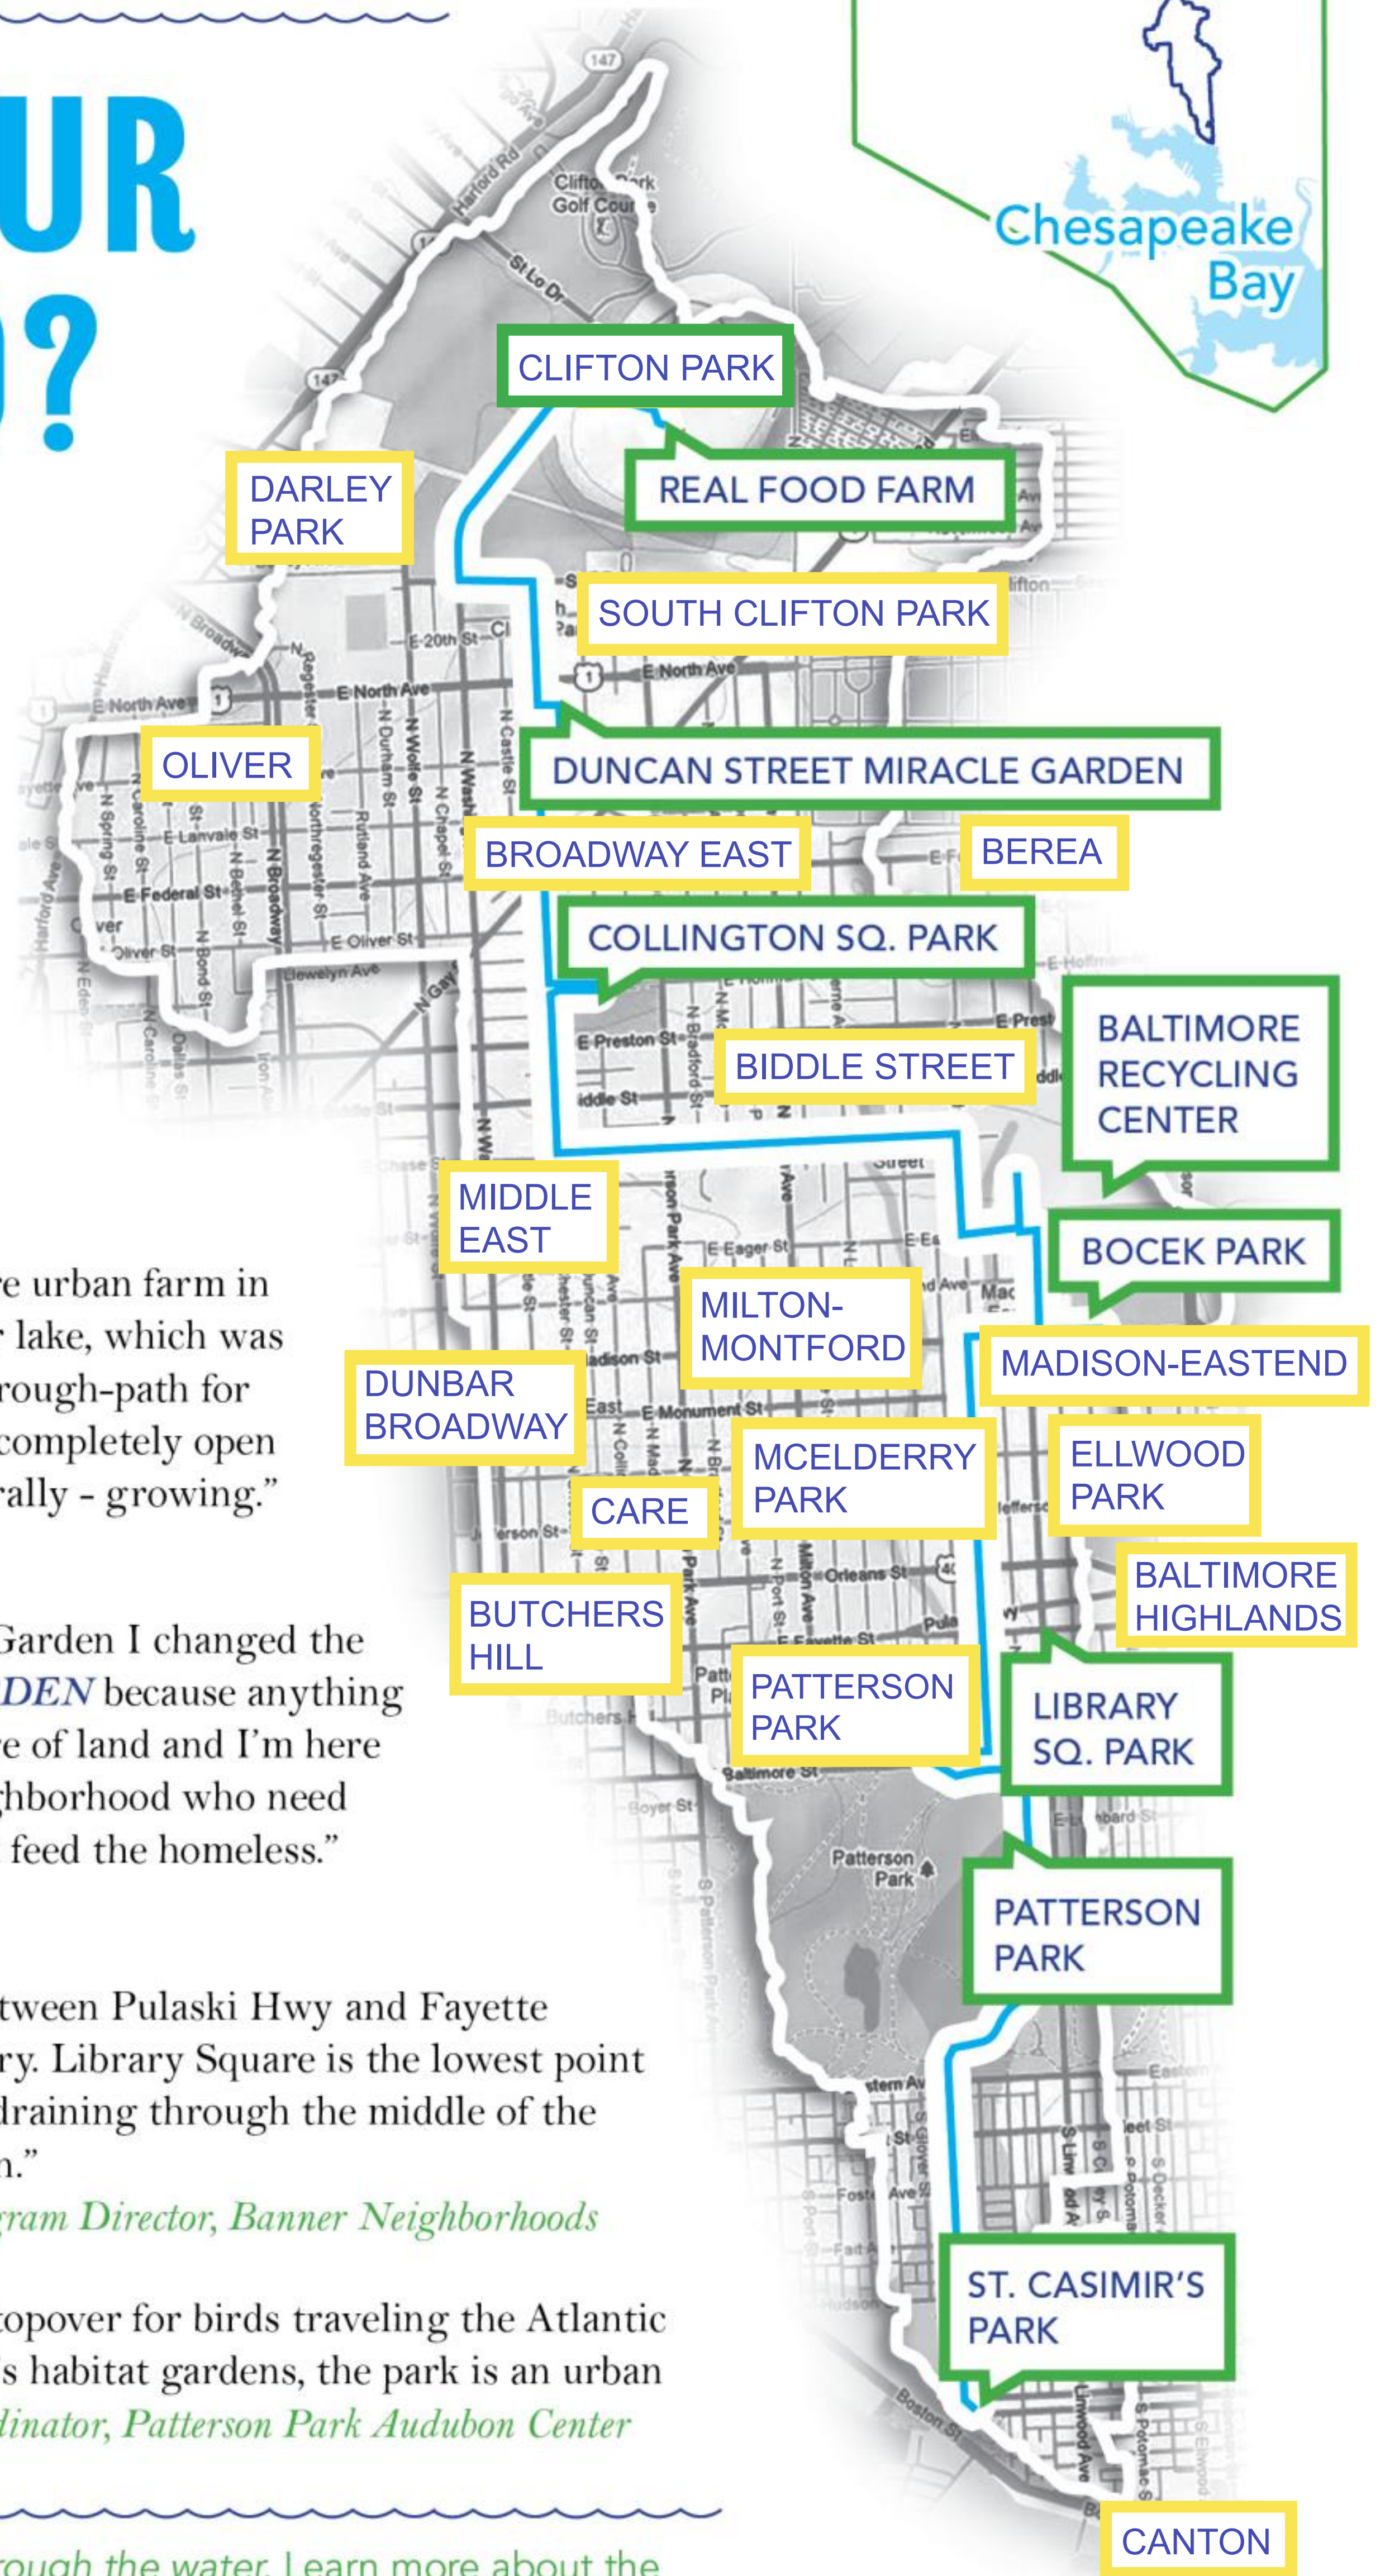

“The garden started in 1988 as the Duncan Street Garden I changed the name to the DUNCAN STREET MIRACLE GARDEN because anything you can name, we can grow. We have almost an acre of land and I’m here most days. The food goes to individuals in the neighborhood who need something and the rest is donated to churches that feed the homeless.”

—Lewis Sharpe, Garden Manager

“LIBRARY SQUARE is the green space situated between Pulaski Hwy and Fayette Street in front of the Patterson Park Branch Library. Library Square is the lowest point of three neighborhoods, resulting in storm water draining through the middle of the park en route to the Inner Harbor outlet in Canton.”

—Leanna Wetmore, Community Organizer/ Art Program Director, Banner Neighborhoods

“PATTERSON PARK is an important migratory stopover for birds traveling the Atlantic Flyway! With the famous Boat Lake and Audubon’s habitat gardens, the park is an urban oasis for wildlife.” —Susie Creamer, Education Coordinator, Patterson Park Audubon Center

We are all connected through the water. Learn more about the Harris Creek Watershed and upload your favorite places in your neighborhood at: harris creek.bluewaterbaltimore.org

■ Recreational and Park Areas
■ Neighborhoods